- ▶ For the first time in history, there are four generations regularly interacting in the workplace and in medical education, making medicine truly intergenerational. Growing up, learning and working with different formative experiences, generational preferences, perspectives, and experiences can make it difficult to have positive work relationships.

Traditionalists/the Silent Generation (born before 1946), Baby Boomers (born 1946-1964), Generation X (born 1965-1980) and Millennials (born 1981-2000) all have their own views of authority, leadership, work ethic, communication and motivation. Understanding more about from where we all started can help bridge the gap created by Generational Differences.
